The recent pandemic has forever revolutionized how we work. Legions of employees have suddenly found themselves working from home, leaving the traditional office workspace behind – and with this shift comes a whole range of new security threats.

Ready your business for the new normal.

Times have changed and so have the security needs of every organization. Security leaders are entering new territory – requiring new levels of governance and oversight, and a greater focus on operational resilience.

Remote workforce

A remote and mobile workforce requires advanced access and data governance management.

Access to sensitive data

With cybercrime on the rise, malicious actors are preying on the susceptibility of employees working remotely.

Operational resilience

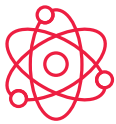

Building an infrastructure that is reliable, flexible and resilient while balancing costs, is a top priority.

More upsell with less effort.

To manage the risk – not just the threats – business leaders are turning to partners who can help them both advance their cloud journey and take the pressure off of their internal IT resources. To succeed in this era of the unexpected, your business needs to adapt to this shifting customer demand.

As customers continue to adjust their security models to the requirements of their markets and regulators, your business has a unique opportunity to offer guidance and services that answer their needs. You can help your customers navigate the complex security landscape with Ingram Micro Cloud.
